Pet Preparedness Tips & Taglines

Let's face it: our pets are members of our family.

As such, our guidance on pet preparedness reflects that. Where we go, they go. When we evacuate, they evacuate with us. When we hunker down, they hunker down with us. They are an important planning factor and present us with a different slate of challenges and conditions.

This month, we'll provide you with pet preparedness tips that will help you and your stakeholders prepare your extended furry family members for a disaster. It's a way for us to extend the same loyalty they have to us, to them. We'll also provide preparedness tips for livestock, as they are a backbone to our economy and a farmer's bottom line.

The resources here are meant to provide you with a quick guide that makes it easy for you to lead by example. Included are:

- Tagline quotes that you can add to your email signature block to direct readers to preparedness sources.
- Tips and key messages. These tips can be posted on bulletin boards, reinforced at meetings, and worked into talking points at public events.
- Social media, graphics, logos, banners, and posters.

Our goal is to provide tools that everyone can use and share to spread the message. We are always open to any feedback or suggestions. These DIY tools will always be synchronized with ongoing seasonal preparedness themes throughout the year.

Key Messages for Pet Preparedness

Know Your Hazards

All hazards can be dangerous to pets, much as they can be to humans. Think through what hazards may apply to you and your family, and how they would impact your pet. Hazards could include, but are not limited to, the following:

- Flooding

- o Think through where you'll go in the event of a flood, and where your pet would go. Can your pet swim if water rises rapidly?
 - Severe weather, thunderstorms
- o Could your pet be impacted by severe weather and a loss of power?
- o Excessive periods of heat or cold can also affect your pet, so make sure to limit their time outside if the temperatures are extreme.
 - Excessive heat or cold
- o Excessive periods of heat or cold can also affect your pet, so make sure to limit their time outside if the temperatures are extreme.
- o Never leave your pet unattended in a locked car.
 - House/Barn Fires
- o Alert first responders that you have a pet in the home if your pet has not left the home.
 - o Tip: Many sites offer decals for your doors and windows which you can use to indicate that a pet lives in the residence. Here's a link to a free one, as an example: <https://secure.aspca.org/take-action/order-your-pet-safety-pack>.
- o Barns often contain flammable materials such as dry hay, bedding, and wood so make sure to take steps to avoid barn fires, such as having your electrical appliances checked regularly and enforcing a no smoking policy in or near the barn.
 - Hurricanes
- o Think through your emergency plan and where you'll evacuate with your pet. If you're sheltering in place, consider where you'll go and make sure to bring your pet with you.
 - Tornadoes
- o Bring your pet with you to a safe location while you shelter in place. Identify a room basement, storm cellar or safe room, or a small interior room on the lowest level of your building. Keep yourself and your pets away from windows, doors, and outside walls.

Talking Points for Pet Preparedness

Make a Pet Emergency Plan

ID your pet. Make sure your pet's tags are up-to-date and securely fastened to your pet's collar. If possible, attach the address and/or phone number of your evacuation site. If your pet gets lost, his tag is his ticket home. Also consider microchipping your pets.

Make sure you have a current photo of your pet for identification purposes.

Make a pet emergency kit using this quick list as a starting point:

- o Pet food
- o Bottled water
- o Medications
- o Veterinary records
- o Cat litter/pan
- o Manual can opener
- o Food dishes
- o First aid kit and other supplies

Identify shelters. For public health reasons, many emergency shelters cannot accept pets. Find out which motels and hotels in the area you plan to evacuate to allow pets well in advance of needing them. There are also several guides that list hotels/motels that permit pets and could serve as a starting point. Include your local animal shelter's number in your list of emergency numbers.

Make sure you have a secure pet carrier, leash, or harness for your pet so that if he panics, he can't escape.

Have an Emergency Plan for your Livestock

For large animals including livestock, think through what you'll do in the case of an emergency. Make sure that your plan includes a site map of your farm that indicates buildings and structures, access routes, blocked passages and barriers, locations of livestock and shelters, locations of hazardous substances (such as pesticides, fuel, etc.), and electrical shut-off locations.

It's helpful to keep a stockpile of supplies on hand in case you can prepare such as:

- Sandbags and plastic sheeting
- Wire and ropes to secure objects
- Lumber and plywood to protect windows
- Extra food and water for livestock
- Extra fuel for tractors and vehicles
- Hand tools
- Fire extinguishers
- A gas-powered generator

If you have employees that work on your farm, review your emergency plan with them and make sure they are aware of where all supplies and animals are always located.

Make sure that you always have identifying information for your animals or livestock and that animals have identification on them.

If possible, plan to evacuate with your animals. Plan out routes and find vehicles and trailers to transport your animals and livestock. Don't forget to ensure that your destination has food, water, handling equipment, and veterinary care. Make sure to build a go-kit for your farm to bring with you, much as you would for your home. Include veterinarian information, insurance agent information, and documentation of coverage, other important documentation, food, water, and medication.

If you must shelter your animals in place, you may want to remove them from pastures and shelter them in a barn or other large structure if possible, providing them with feed and water. If you do so, make sure the shelter is free of neighboring debris, trees which can uproot easily, overhead powerlines, etc. In other cases, it may be best to let your livestock remain in pastures, as confinement in a shelter can take away the abilities of animals to protect themselves. Which option you choose may depend on the hazard and the severity. For potential flooding, make sure to relocate your animals to higher ground.

Since most large animals and livestock reside outside, don't forget to consider extreme weather emergencies. In extreme cold, make sure that your animals and livestock have warm, dry bedding and plenty of food and water. Insulate the shelter from wind, snow, and rain.

For more information on preparing your livestock for disasters, see the Humane Society's Disaster preparedness page.
